

NO BREAD, SUICIDE.

The absence of bread on his table led Juan Erramuspe to take his life. The man and his wife and four children had gathered for breakfast when he discovered that his wife had forgotten the bread. When he discovered this omission he became angry and going to the kitchen, exclaimed he would get the bread himself. When he returned he held a razor. Before the wife could prevent the action Erramuspe had drawn the keen blade across his throat. The woman and her four small children fled from the house. A neighbor was attracted by the screams of the family, and when officers were summoned they found Erramuspe's body near the dining table. The tragedy occurred at the Erramuspe home at Montecito today. He was a Basque laborer, 40 years old.
